Monks launch largest demo against Burma junta

The Buddhist monks in Myanmar have launched the largest demonstration against the military junta in the country since the 1988 uprising. The monks, who are the spiritual leaders of the country, are protesting against the military's brutal rule and the recent election results. They are demanding a return to democratic rule and the release of political prisoners.

Quenching
The monks' protest was met with a violent response from the military. They used tear gas and live ammunition against the peaceful demonstrators. The monks are now being persecuted and many have been arrested. The international community is condemning the military's actions and calling for an end to the violence.

The monks' protest is a significant challenge to the military's rule. It has gained widespread support from the Burmese people. The monks are calling for a nationwide strike and more protests. They are determined to continue their fight for democracy and human rights.

The FCC's new rules on political advertising are a good start, but they don't go far enough. The Commission should go further and require stations to disclose the identity of the person or entity that paid for the ad. This would help the public know who is behind the message and hold advertisers accountable.

Moderate Fukuda picked to lead Japan

Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's resignation has opened the door for a more moderate leader to take the helm of Japan, as the Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) prepares to hold a leadership election.

The LDP, which has ruled Japan for decades, is expected to nominate a candidate who is seen as a more centrist figure. This move is seen as a response to the growing demand for a more balanced approach to Japan's foreign and domestic policies.

The current government has faced criticism for its aggressive stance on territorial disputes and its handling of the Fukushima nuclear crisis. A more moderate leader is expected to bring a fresh perspective to the government.

The election is expected to be held in the coming weeks. The LDP is expected to win a majority in the upcoming election, ensuring a smooth transition of power.

US security firm faces criminal charges in Iraq

A US security firm, Blackwater, has been charged with the deaths of two Iraqi civilians in a shooting in Baghdad. The charges are part of a larger investigation into the firm's activities in Iraq.

The firm, which is a private contractor, has been accused of various human rights violations in Iraq. The charges are the first criminal charges filed against the firm since it was established.

The investigation is being led by the US Department of Justice. The firm is expected to face further charges if the investigation continues to uncover more evidence.

Falling German birthrate dispels birth miracle myth

The German birthrate has fallen to its lowest level in decades, dispelling the myth of a 'birth miracle' that had been widely reported. The decline is attributed to various factors, including economic uncertainty and changing social norms.

The birthrate has been falling steadily since the late 1990s. This trend is seen as a challenge to the German government, which has been trying to encourage higher birthrates to support its aging population.

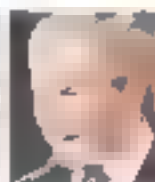

The decline in birthrates is also seen as a reflection of the changing role of women in society. Many women are now prioritizing their careers and education over having children.

Bush to ask $35 billion to fight Iraq, Afghan wars

President George W. Bush has asked Congress for $35 billion to fund the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. The request is part of a larger effort to secure the funding needed to continue the military operations.

The funding is needed to cover the costs of military operations, including the deployment of troops and the purchase of equipment. The request is expected to be approved by Congress.

The wars have been costly for the US, both in terms of money and lives. The funding request is seen as a necessary step to ensure that the military operations can continue without interruption.

Vague laws, policies seen behind Taiwan graft

The lack of clear laws and policies is seen as a major factor behind the widespread corruption in Taiwan. The government is expected to take steps to clarify the laws and policies to reduce the risk of graft.

The corruption has been a major problem in Taiwan for many years. It has led to a loss of trust in the government and has hindered economic development.

The government is expected to take steps to clarify the laws and policies to reduce the risk of graft. This includes strengthening the legal system and improving the transparency of government operations.

A jeweler's life is a journey of discovery, of finding the perfect stone, the perfect cut, the perfect setting. It is a journey that takes years of hard work, dedication, and a deep understanding of the art of jewelry making. The diagram illustrates the experimental setup for studying the reaction between a laser-produced plasma and a gas jet. A laser beam enters a chamber from the left, creating a plasma at the entrance. A gas jet enters from the bottom. The reaction zone is labeled 'Reaction Zone' and 'Plasma Jet Interaction'. The products are labeled 'Products' and 'Gas Jet'. The diagram also shows the 'Laser Beam' and 'Gas Jet' entering the chamber. The reaction zone is labeled 'Reaction Zone' and 'Plasma Jet Interaction'. The products are labeled 'Products' and 'Gas Jet'.

1. The first step is to identify the problem. In this case, the problem is that the system is not working properly.

2. The next step is to gather information about the problem. This includes checking the logs, looking at the error messages, and talking to the users who are reporting the problem.

3. Once you have gathered information, you need to analyze the problem. This involves looking for patterns in the data and trying to figure out what is causing the problem.

4. After you have analyzed the problem, you need to develop a solution. This could involve changing the code, updating the hardware, or changing the configuration.

5. The final step is to implement the solution and test it to make sure it works.
